On November 27th, Canada's National Committee of Pacific Economic Cooperation (CANCPEC), and the Australian Pacific Economic Cooperation Committee (AusPECC) co-hosted a roundtable discussion to launch a Track 1.5 process to review and update the Comprehensive and Progressive Agreement for Trans-Pacific Partnership (CPTPP) Chapter 14 on e-commerce. This event was the first gathering of more than fifteen digital trade experts from eleven APEC economies to discuss how to ensure the CPTPP remains of the highest possible standard for the region in a time of rapid digital advancements.

Throughout the meeting, participating experts discussed the following questions:

1. What are the key gaps and challenges with Chapter 14 in its current form (i.e. interoperability)?
2. What should be considered for inclusion to future-proof Chapter 14 (i.e. role of AI in trade facilitation, ethical AI, AI Safety, classification of new technologies)
3. What best practices can be learned from other more progressive regional trade agreements like DEPA, WTO's e-commerce moratorium, etc.?

Some key points of the discussion highlighted the need to balance updating the provisions of the CPTPP to reflect modernization, while effectively implementing the existing commitments with regular monitoring. There was an emphasis on building trust, particularly with cross-border data flows. The discussion also advocated for more coordination across CPTPP chapters, as well as future-proofing and adapting the agreement to meet the evolving needs of the digital economy.

Key suggestions from the discussion included addressing inconsistencies in rule application, introducing pathfinder initiatives for digital trade, enhancing stakeholder engagement through the CPTPP E-Commerce Committee's activities, and utilizing MOUs for more underdeveloped and experimental areas like digital payments. Public engagement was also encouraged to strengthen dialogue and the overall understanding of trade policy. The discussion also reflected on formal mechanisms of cooperation such as the creation of a secretariat, working group or task force to regularly evaluate the risks and opportunities of e-commerce.

The experts will meet again in February to further identify leading standards on e-commerce and ambitious recommendations to present to the 2025 CPTPP Commission under Australia's leadership.
